The 2008 Vote

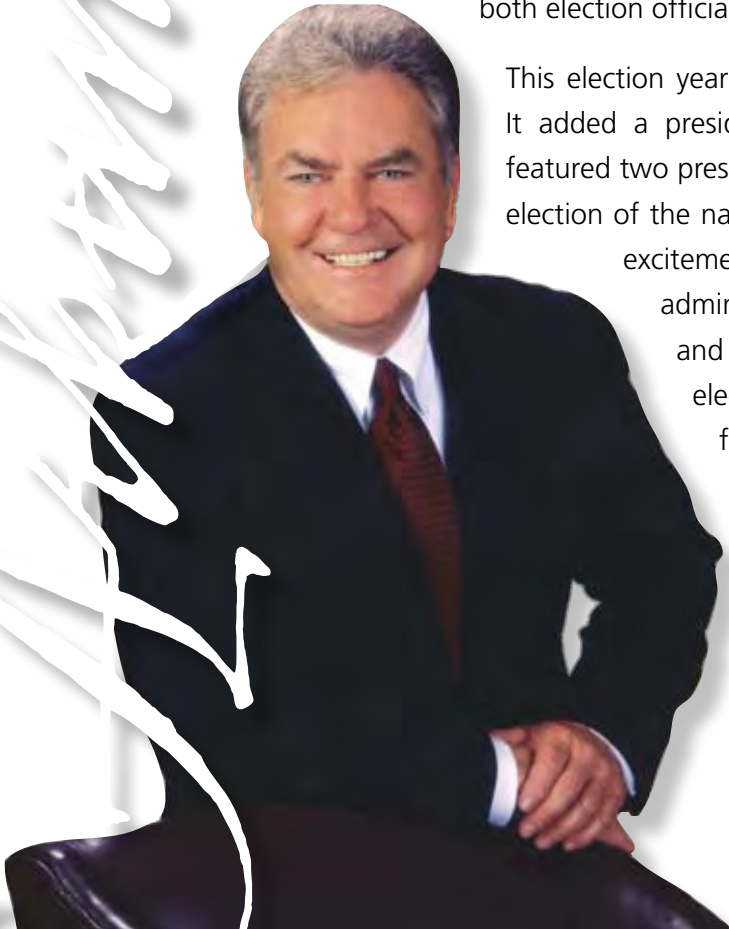

Voices of Arkansas

It is my pleasure to present this edition of Voices of Arkansas for the 2008 elections. This publication provides a snapshot of voter turnout and registration for 2008 and provides a look at the programs my office provided to prepare both election officials and voters alike.

This election year was a historic one for Arkansas and the nation. It added a presidential primary to the state's election schedule, featured two presidential candidates with Arkansas ties and saw the election of the nation's first African-American president. During the excitement of a presidential election cycle, the state's election administrators find themselves under the microscope, and I sincerely applaud the efforts of our county clerks, election commissioners and poll workers. Even in the face of torrential storms, they remained dedicated to conducting the people's business.

I hope you will find this information both interesting and useful. Detailed election results are always available from the Elections Division, so please contact my office if we can be of help to you.

The 2008 Vote

A Tale of Two Primaries

Dodging deadly tornadoes that cut across the northern half of the state, Arkansas weathered its first dedicated Presidential Primary Election on February 5, 2008.

The General Assembly enacted legislation in 2005 to hold an earlier presidential primary in an effort to increase the state's prominence in selecting party nominees. A number of other states followed suit, however, resulting in 24 states with primaries or caucuses held on the same day as Arkansas's.

Election Day on February 5, 2008, was also dramatically affected by deadly tornadoes that swept across the northern third of the state just as polls neared closing. The storms cut power and damaged some facilities in nine counties: Craighead, Crittenden, Cross, Izard, Jackson, Pope, Sharp, Stone and Van Buren. Thankfully, no poll workers or voters were injured, and voting equipment and ballots remained secured. Because of power outages and widespread damage, four of those counties were forced to delay tabulating and reporting official results, but the Secretary of State was able to certify all results by February 29.

Voter turnout for the new primary was 35 percent of registered voters

(compared to 22 percent in 2004) with almost a third casting early or absentee ballots. This rise in turnout can partly be attributed to strong Arkansas connections in the race: former Governor Mike Huckabee and former First Lady Hillary Clinton were both on the ballot for the Republican and Democratic nominations, respectively.

In the traditional Preferential Primary on May 20, voters went to the polls to select party nominees for county and district offices. Without the draw of presidential candidates or major statewide races on that ballot, however, turnout hit a historic low of 18 percent.

The General Assembly voted in 2009 to end the separate Presidential Primary and return to a unified Preferential Primary in May, which will take effect with the 2012 elections.

Continuing Education

Training Election Officials

Preparing the state's election officials is an ongoing effort of the Secretary of State's Elections Division. Leading up to the 2008 elections, representatives of the office made at least one site visit with county election officials in the 72 counties that upgraded voting equipment under the Help America Vote Act (HAVA). Staff also conducted 65 separate training sessions with more than 225 election officials and poll workers participating in sessions held regionally or at the Secretary of State's central training center near the Capitol.

In 2008, the Elections Division conducted numerous training events and meetings in preparation for the historic General Election. In May, staff offered training on the Network of Voters in Arkansas (or NOVA, the statewide voter registration system) for 34 new county clerks and deputy clerks. At the end of the third quarter as the General Election approached, the division conducted a refresher course on NOVA for over 100 county clerks and deputies.

Later in the summer, 190 of the state's county clerks, election commissioners and election coordinators attended one of 10 user group meetings. Topics focused on the steps for certifying election results, which begins with thorough logic and accuracy testing of equipment prior to Election Day and continues with tabulation and reconciliation after voting concludes.

Trainers also conducted five workshops for local election administrators at the office's training facility near the Capitol. Eight on-site training sessions for counties that program their own ballots and voting equipment.

Election Prep

Maintenance, Testing & Voter Outreach

The Secretary of State's office provided more than $350,000 in state and federal funds toward maintenance and licensing for the HAVA-compliant voting equipment. It also provided $136,440 in grant funds to 13 counties for ADA upgrades to polling sites and $52,639 to the Disability Rights Center to produce a training video and brochures on assisting voters with disabilities.

The Secretary of State's office utilized a surplus in federal HAVA funding to cover half the cost of voting machine maintenance for each county for the 2008-2009 period.

In preparation for the 2008 General Election, the Secretary of State's office and Arkansas's county clerks conducted a performance-load test on the statewide voter registration system on August 22, 2008. It was performed in conjunction with InfoSENTRY Services, Inc., Election Systems & Software and the Arkansas Department of Information Systems with the following objectives:

- Assess the system's performance at varying levels of demand,
- Test the ability to move data to a secondary site in case of disaster,
- Evaluate recovery from short-term outages, and
- Assess the system's back-up and restoration operations.

The test showed a number of improvements from the first such test in 2006, including better memory and CPU resource management. The findings of this test helped guide revisions in programming and procedures to improve the system for all users.

REACHING OUT TO VOTERS

Voter outreach and election official training remained a priority for the Elections Division in order to continue improving procedures implemented under the federal Help America Vote Act. In 2007 alone, Elections personnel conducted more than 275 outreach events around the state, holding voter registration drives and training poll workers on updated voting equipment. Programs were also held for more than 70 groups including schools, civic groups and senior adult centers. Outreach staff also held 158 demonstrations of voting machines, involving approximately 3,500 Arkansans.

All You Need to Know About Voting in the Natural State

With voters now familiar with voting equipment that debuted in 2006, the focus for the 2008 elections got back to basics – making sure Arkansans knew how to update their voter registration, where to go vote and what they would find on their ballots.

The office continued to utilize its website www.VoteNaturally.org as a one-stop resource for information on voter registration and voting issues. All voter outreach materials and advertisements pointed to the website for "all you need to know about voting in the Natural State." Especially helpful on the site is a tool that voters can use to look up their own registration address and correct polling site – vital information that, if not up-to-date, can delay voters on Election Day.

The Secretary of State's office developed a statewide multi-media campaign to reach voters in every age group. Ads in more than 340 newspapers along with targeted radio and television spots reminded voters to take a few minutes to check their information before heading to the polls. The office also produced a special election edition of its quarterly Capitol Report newsletter with general voting information, as well as a list of state and district candidates on the November ballot.

SOCIAL NETWORKING

With an eye on emerging media, the Secretary of State's office sought to reach new audiences through social networking Web sites. More than 2,000 Facebook users either joined the group "RU Ready 2B Heard" or clicked on a rotating ad that targeted Arkansans over 18 years of age. Those ads appeared almost 4.5 million times during the two-month run with a 4 percent response rate. The messages promoted the voter registration deadline, early voting and Election Day voting. The Facebook group page became an outlet for posting voter information and deadline reminders and for answering questions posted by group members.

The Secretary of State produced public service announcements and how-to videos and posted them on the state's YouTube portal at www.arkansas.gov as well as the Secretary of State's website. Other internet tools included banner ads on the home pages of local television affiliates in Little Rock, Fayetteville and Jonesboro.

The 2008 Vote

Turnout By Party

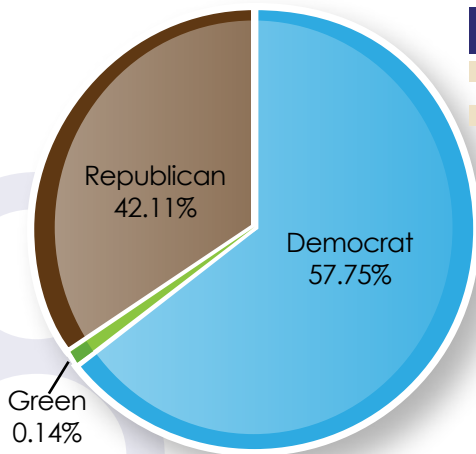

With the new Presidential Primary, the 2008 elections saw mixed results in voter turnout. The February primary turnout improved over 2004, up 13 percent in a race with no incumbent on the ticket. Voters in the state had a particular interest in the presidential race with not one, but two candidates with ties to the state.

In a non-gubernatorial year, the presidential race traditionally draws Arkansans to the polls. Without that race in the May Preferential Primary, however, turnout dipped to 18 percent, the lowest turnout for a primary in the state's history. The primary election saw 318 candidates file for the 231 state, district and nonpartisan judicial offices up for election in 2008. Of those, only 64 were contested for their party's nomination, none of which were for statewide offices, which contributed to the low voter turnout for this election.

The historic General Election in November, on the other hand, was among the state's highest turnout in history. About 43 percent of voters cast early or absentee ballots, totaling about 473,600 ballots. Almost 1.1 million — 64.52 percent — of Arkansas's registered voters participated. That's up almost 2 percent from the last presidential election in 2004.

Presidential Primary

Early and Absentee Voting

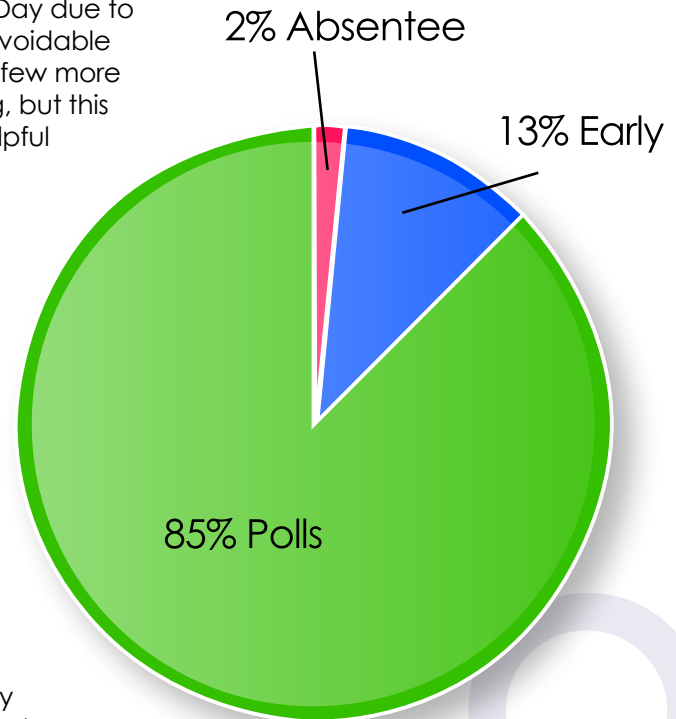

Election officials predicted a heavy turnout for the Presidential Preferential Primary, and many Arkansans took the opportunity to vote early in the week leading up to Election Day. For the Presidential Primary, 15 percent of the state's voters cast their ballots by absentee or early voting.

There are no qualifications on voting early; any qualified voter in the state can choose to vote during the early voting period, which was seven days prior to the primary election on February 5, 2008. Early voting hours during major elections are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, ending at 5 p.m. the day before the election. Voters simply go to the designated early polling site and cast their ballots just as they would at their precincts on Election Day.

Another alternative is absentee voting, which is available to qualified voters who are unable to vote at their polls on Election Day due to illness, disability or unavoidable absence. It involves a few more steps than early voting, but this option is especially helpful for students, disabled voters and the elderly, as well as those voters whose work or travel schedules conflict with regular voting hours.

Voters cast provisional ballots when their voter status cannot be confirmed or is questioned by a poll watcher. Under state law, county election commissioners review these ballots and notify voters whether those votes could be counted.

Preferential Primary

Early and Absentee Voting

Although turnout was expected to be lower for the May 20 Preferential Primary and Nonpartisan Judicial Election, more Arkansans voted early than they had earlier in 2008. A quarter of the state's ballots were cast during the 15-day early voting period for this primary. Seventy-five percent of voters still opted to head to their polling sites on Election Day.

General Election

Early and Absentee Voting

The number of Arkansas voters casting their ballots before Election Day almost doubled from the primary in May. For the November 4 General Election, 43 percent cast early or absentee ballots, up from 15 percent in May. This helped ease the potential for congestion at the polls for what promised to be a heavy turnout.

For this and other elections in the state, the county clerk's office serves as the early voting site in most counties. However, Arkansas law permits county boards of election commissioners to offer additional sites outside the courthouse.

Voices of Arkansas

Voter Registration 2008

In addition to the requirements of the Help America Vote Act (HAVA) of 2002, voter registration is governed by another reform effort, the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) of 1993.

Implemented in Arkansas in 1996, NVRA is more commonly known as the Motor Voter Law because it expanded voter registration beyond the courthouse into other agencies that serve the public, such as driver's license offices.

In 2007 and 2008, the Secretary of State's office worked with state agencies and their local offices to train staff on the voter registration requirements of NVRA. Trainers visited 300 public agencies such as libraries, Department of Human Services offices and motor vehicle registration centers to instruct employees on providing voter registration applications to patrons and visitors as required under the act. This effort helps ensure that under-served populations are afforded the opportunity to make their voices heard.
